INTRODUCTION

THE Avery Memorial Library was founded in 1890 by Mr. Samuel P. Avery, of New York, and Mrs. Mary O. Avery, his wife, as a memorial to their son Henry Ogden Avery, who died April 30, 1890. No better statement of the object and conditions of this foundation can be made than the letter of Mr. and Mrs. Avery to President Low, which is as follows:

4 East 38th Street, New York, June 23, 1890.

Mr. Seth Low, President Columbia College.

Dear Sir: With your consent and that of the Trustees of Columbia College we propose to establish the Avery Architectural Library in memory of our son Henry Ogden Avery.

We propose (1) to give to Columbia College, for the purpose mentioned, the library, comprising all volumes relating to architecture and the decorative arts, and other professional books, owned by the late Henry O. Avery, including one or more folios of original architectural drawings by the late Henry O. Avery; and in addition thereto (2) to give to the Treasurer of the Corporation such sums as may be required to pay for books purchased, as provided below, on notice of their purchase, previous to the 1st day of January, 1891, not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, and also (3) to give to the Treasurer of the Corporation on the 1st day of July of this year the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, to be invested and to form a permanent fund, the interest of which is to be employed, first, in binding and making the necessary repairs of the books forming said Avery Architectural Library, and second, in the purchase of newly published books, or others, under the conditions stated below.*

It is our wish that the purchases made for the Avery Architectural Library be made exclusively by a Commission of three persons, namely, the Librarian of Columbia College, the Professor or acting Professor of the Architectural Department of the School of Mines, and Mr. Russell Sturgis of New York, whose successor, in case of his declination at any time, is to be selected by the other two members of the Commission as above, to be always an architect and not immediately connected with Columbia College.

It is our wish also that the books so purchased, including those coming from the late Henry O. Avery, shall be kept together in one room, alcove, or the like, to be set apart and designated for the purpose and approved by the Commission of purchase, but without impairing in any way the constitutional control of the college property vested in the Trustees by the charter, and that they be kept as a library of reference only, and not allowed to leave the library building except on special occasions, as for binding, repairs, etc., or for the purpose of having photographic or other copies made of plates and the like, but always on the express approval of the Commission of purchase, or a majority of it.

It is also our wish that a tablet, or some other form of record, which we will furnish, be put in a prominent position, and always retained, in the room or alcove devoted to the Avery Library, and that a book-plate be pasted inside the cover of each volume of the library, the said tablet and book-plate to state the foundation of this library by the parents of Henry Ogden Avery in his memory.

 Since increased to twenty-five thousand dollars.*

It is also our wish that, at the discretion of the Trustees, a separate catalogue of this library from time to time be printed in pamphlet form, at the expense of the college, and that copies of it in sufficient number be furnished the Commission of purchase for free distribution to architects, students of art, and other persons or institutions to whom the Avery Architectural Library may be useful.

(Signed) Samuel P. Avery,
Mary O. Avery.

The conditions of this endowment were accepted by the Board of Trustees on the 6th day of October, 1890.

Mr. Henry Ogden Avery, to whose memory this noble foundation was made, was born in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., January 31, 1852. The influences surrounding him in his home life, the house and associations of his father, naturally turned his mind to matters of art. Mr. Samuel P. Avery has long been identified with art and its various interests, and for many years has been widely known as a collector in different fields of art, whose treasures have always been freely available to the citizens of New York and the lovers of art objects generally.

Commencing with the Cooper Union Schools, the young Henry went in 1870 into the office of Mr. Russell Sturgis as a student of architecture, and in 1872 on his advice went to Paris and entered the École des Beaux Arts under the late able and honored Prof. Jules André. The young man's course of study and practice in Paris was long and delightful. From 1872 to 1879 he devoted himself uninterruptedly to the study of architecture and art, and during these years formed the acquaintance and enjoyed the counsel of many celebrated artists and art critics in Paris. After his return to New York he was for a time in the office of Mr. Richard M. Hunt, and from 1883 on, as an independent architect, devoted himself to the quiet and industrious prosecution of his profession.

During his brief career as a practising architect he was active, and either built or made designs for a number of buildings and monuments. He was also earnestly engaged in the Architectural League of New York and in the Archæological Institute of America, and was a frequent writer on art topics. His untimely and lamented death at the beginning of the fullness of his career called forth numerous expressions of regret from the persons and from the organizations to whom he was best known.

In his memory, and in the interest of the arts he loved and of the work to which he had devoted himself, his parents determined to found in Columbia College a library of architecture and the allied arts. The letter of Mr. and Mrs. Avery, given above, states clearly the conditions of this foundation and the method of its administration and development. After the expenditure of the sum mentioned in this letter, Mr. Avery very greatly extended the credit in the hands of the Commission, and made possible the creation of a collection much broader and richer than the Commission had, at the outset, dared to hope for. The scope of the library was gradually extended until its conception was changed from a selection of a limited number of standard and important works to a reasonably full representation of the literatures of the building and decorative arts.

The collection as it now stands numbers about thirteen thousand volumes, the majority of which are richly illustrated, and in great proportion large and costly works. It was the purpose in gathering the Avery Library to collect the material out of which, first, any historical question concerning the development of any form of architecture or the architecture of any land or period could be successfully studied, together with the architectural development of any important building or locality; and in the second place, to establish a storehouse in which architects and art-workers might find almost infinite resources of suggestion and inspiration for their work. Hence, historical architecture, rather than an accumulation of treatises on mere construction, characterizes the library. From this position it was but a step to archæology, and the collection is very rich in all those departments of archæology which deal with architecture, sculpture, and the other decorative arts. Supplemented in some degree by the general library, it contains sets of nearly all the architectural periodicals and many of those devoted to art and archæology, as well as the transactions of societies in these fields. Most of the large and extensive works devoted to the description and study of the monuments of architecture in all lands and periods will be found here. The general treatises on architecture from Vitruvius, Alberti, and Serlio down to the present time are fully represented. Many of the older works are interesting and valuable for the engravings they contain, which are often from famous hands and of artistic workmanship, or depict objects long since destroyed.

Nor has less attention been paid to special works on the different classes of architecture. The oriental, classic, the modern European, Gothic, Romanesque, and Renaissance, in all their various subdivisions and classes, have been considered, and, in like manner, care has been taken to include all the various forms of architectural work as defined by the uses to which buildings are destined. Ecclesiastical architecture, domestic architecture, and the architecture of theaters, schools, public buildings of all kinds, and of monumental structures, together with military architecture, are largely represented. Persistent efforts have been made to include all works which could throw light on the history of architecture, while the bibliography of the subject and the lives of architects have also been gathered.

Despite the extent of the collections in the above-mentioned fields, it is probable that where this library compares most favorably with any other is in its richness in treatises on local architecture, by which is meant the monographs and descriptive works concerning the architecture of individual towns, districts, and regions, and important single buildings. These collections relating to local architecture may vary from a single monograph of a few pages about some ancient fragments built into a later building, to the whole body of memoirs of a local society, and also to the scores of volumes, including many hundreds of plates, which describe the architecture of Paris or Rome.

The practical and mechanical phases of architecture have naturally received much less attention. The newer standard works on construction in all its details, including ventilation, heating, and lighting have been gathered, and, incidentally, the older works, which have largely historical value only. To go farther into the field of scientific construction would be to make rather a library of engineering, than one of architectural fine art. In like manner it has been thought unnecessary to make the collection at all complete in treatises on architectural drawing, perspective, and the like, but some important works have been provided.

Apart from historical architecture, the library is most rich in the large subject of decorative art not purely architectural. Sculpture of all kinds and of all epochs, it has been thought necessary to include. Mosaic, mural painting, and stained and painted glass are of course closely connected with building, but in addition to these arts, those subsidiary arts which are applied to portable objects have received attention. There are hundreds of important works on tapestry, textile fabrics, furniture, pottery, glass vessels, costume, arms and armor, and similar topics. Among the general art works are numerous illustrated catalogues of art collections existing in museums, or of famous collections made or dispersed during past generations down to recent times. The most of these have been the direct gift of Mr. Avery, whose intimate connection and wide acquaintance with the commerce of art have made him conversant with this form of literature. Indeed Mr. Avery's personal purchases of wisely selected volumes have been constant from the beginning. Not a few of these volumes are interesting from their former ownership, or from their rarity, fine binding, or because they have been extra illustrated, or contain original drawings and manuscript annotations by their former owners.

The printing of the catalogue, which Mr. Avery with characteristic generosity has made his own charge, has occupied nearly two years, during which time large additions have been made to the library. These additions have been incorporated in the catalogue in such portions of the alphabet as were not yet printed, so that the later letters in the alphabet represent more fully than the earlier the collection as it stands to-day. It is intended at a later time to include the omissions and future additions to the library in a supplementary volume.

The printing has been done by the well-known press of Theodore L. DeVinne & Co., who have from the beginning shown great interest in the undertaking, and whose excellent work speaks for itself. From the fact that the printing has gone on simultaneously with the gathering of the books, a few titles may appear in the latter part of the alphabet without the proper author or other collateral entries, which belonged in the letters already printed. Much care has been taken in the titles of the numerous illustrated works here given, to state the number of plates and other bibliographical information not always found in similar catalogues. It is believed that these data, together with the fact that this catalogue is one of the most extensive in print on this subject, will render the work of great and lasting value to professional men, librarians, collectors, and the public at large.

It should also be noted that the catalogue as here printed contains only the works in the Avery Library, and does not include books on similar topics contained in the general library of Columbia College. Books already in the general library have not, in most cases, been duplicated, and this fact may explain the absence of certain well-known and standard works which might naturally be looked for in a collection of this extent.

A card catalogue in duplicate of the entire collection has been prepared both by authors and subjects, one copy of each entry being placed in the general catalogue of the library, while the other copy forms a special catalogue for the Avery Library. It was deemed wise to issue now only the author catalogue, both from the extent of the work and because it was desirable that the subject catalogue be complete before beginning to print. This catalogue contains, therefore, only author and title entries. It is hoped later to print a subject catalogue, either as a whole or in special sections by topic.

The library has been catalogued almost entirely by Miss Harriet B. Prescott, a member of the library staff, assisted in the preparation of the cards principally by Miss Annie I. Mann and Miss Rae Foster. The work of cataloguing has been carried on under the special supervision of the librarian who, with the coöperation of the other members of the Commission and of Mr. Avery, has chiefly gathered the books. The work of immediate preparation for the press and of proof-reading in all its stages has been done by Mr. C. Alex. Nelson of the library staff, whose experience as the editor of the Astor Library Catalogue rendered him peculiarly well fitted for the task.

The collection of books has been classified in a simple and readily intelligible manner by subjects, on the shelves, so far as this was possible with volumes varying so greatly in size. The classification is printed after this Introduction.

That this rich collection of books may be more widely known, and may more fully serve architects and investigators of every class, the donors have caused this catalogue to be printed.

The Commission desires to express its thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Avery for their great generosity and kindness; also to various friends at home and abroad who have presented books, and to President Low and the Trustees of Columbia College for constant and hearty coöperation in the gathering and care of this collection.
